POLICE PREPARING TO ROUND UP REDS

Chiefs Will Hold Meeting to Prepare Campaign.

ANARCHIST ROGUE GALLERY

Former Member of Clan, Now an Heir, Makes Disclosures of Great Importance.

PARIS, June 9.—As a result of the attempt to assassinate King Alfonso and his bride on their wedding day, the chiefs of police in the various large cities in the southern part of Europe have decided to hold a conference in this city next week.

The meetings of this conference, which will be led by the chiefs of police of Rome, Madrid, and Paris, are to be held in secret, and plans for a campaign against the anarchists who infest southern Europe are to be discussed. The lists of names of anarchists now in the possession of the police authorities of the various countries will be compared and a special rogues' gallery consisting exclusively of anarchists, will be made up from photographs now in the hands of the authorities. A complete set of photographs will then be sent to every police department in France, Italy, Spain, and Portugal.

It is known to the police of Paris that the anarchistic colony in this city has increased very much during the last few months and more than a score of special detectives are watching all meetings which come to the knowledge of the police. It is also said that two detectives whose names are, of course, kept secret, have succeeded in joining the inner circle of the anarchistic group in this city.

The police are indebted to a former anarchist, Charles Crunni, for much valuable information. Crunni, who is a blacksmith by trade, was recently captured together with a number of other suspicious characters during a raid in the Paris markets, and in his pockets were found diagrams of infernal machines of very ingenious construction.

While he was confined in a cell it was discovered that he was the long-lost heir to a considerable fortune left by an old man who died some time ago in a provincial town in the southern part of France. When the news was broken to him he was very much affected by it, and said that, as he had only been driven into the ranks of the anarchists by his inability to get work, and as he now would be able to lead an honest life, he was determined to give up all connection with the assassins. He asked to be permitted to see the chief of police, to whom he confessed a number of intended crimes which had come to his knowledge and which the authorities will now be able to prevent.

After serving his term in prison it is his intention secretly to leave the country to escape the revenge of his former associates, who, he says, forced him to stick to them by threatening him with death.

Socialistic Utopia.

"When the ideal socialistic state shall have become a fact no man will be compelled to work more than eleven minutes a day," said Jules Guesde, the socialist member of Chamber Roubaix, in an interview the other day.

"Modern machinery now form all the necessary work in the world if every man over twenty years of age will do his share by working that length of time every day in the year, with the exception of Sundays and holidays.

"This is no loose statement, but is based on statistical facts, which I have spent considerable time in looking up. The work of seven men is sufficient to grow enough grain, to raise it, grind it into flour, and make it into bread, enough to provide for 1,000 people; and if the work of seven men is sufficient to provide food for 1,000, that would mean that seven full days' work by the whole community would provide for 1,000 days' material necessities.

"I intend to make it my aim to prove this to the people of the world, and when it becomes generally known they will work out their own salvation and we shall have a society where there are no drones and no overworked men, women, and children. Every one will have ample time to enjoy life as it should be enjoyed by every human being, and he will have the consciousness of knowing that he has fulfilled his duty to his fellowmen. This system, of course, will mean the end of our modern millionaires and multi-millionaires, but it will at the same time mean the end of the cruel wage slavery as it exists today."

Boy Absinthe Fied.

A most revolting crime has just been discovered in one of the public schools here. A small boy of seven years has been systematically driven toward insanity by his own mother through the use of absinthe.

The child, almost daily had fits in school, during which he exhibited symptoms strongly resembling those of delirium tremens. The child was very vicious and was always picking quarrels with his fellow pupils. He was constantly asking to be excused from the schoolroom for a minute, and the teacher, suspecting that these absences were not altogether unconnected with the fits, had him watched. It was found that he carried with him a bottle of absinthe from which he continually drank a swallow at a time. Upon investigation it was learned that the little fellow's mother filled the bottle for him every day, and that she did it on purpose, knowing what a terrible effect the dreadful liquor had upon the child.

Boycotting the Pope.

A boycott of the Pope by the cardinals resident in Rome has been stated to exist, but the idea is quite erroneous. The Vatican is certainly less frequented by the cardinals than it was under Leo XIII, who had many disciples among the Sacred College, as well as cardinals of his own creation. He, moreover, had lived in Rome previous to the election, whereas the present Pope seldom came to the Eternal City, his first visit being about twenty years ago, when he was consecrated as Bishop of Mantua.

Plus X's apparent unpopularity among the cardinals is due, then, to his not having become familiar with them before his election.

On the other hand, the dozen of the Sacred College, Cardinal Gregalia, is considered by his holiness, who values his advice very highly. Cardinals Gregalia was not in sympathy with Leo XIII, and did not frequent the Vatican during his pontificate.

Douma Leaders in Secret Framing Protest to Czar

Prince of the Church Seized by French Police As Anarchist Suspect

Cardinal Mathieu Victim of an Odd Mistake. Paid Weepers Mourn for Bey of Tunis. Paris Miniature Exhibition.

By THE MARQUIS OF CASTELLANE.

PARIS, June 9.—Cardinal Mathieu, the eminent Prince of the Church, who recently became a member of the French Academy, has just had a most extraordinary adventure during the course of which he had to spend several hours in a cell at the police station.

For purposes of greater comfort and convenience when traveling it is Cardinal Mathieu's habit to discard his priestly robes and don the ordinary habiliments of a layman. Furthermore, as notwithstanding his conventional dress he does not at all look the common citizen, the distinguished clergyman in order to turn off any suspicious of his real state which his somewhat self-conscious appearance might evoke, he invariably starts a conversation with his fellow travelers on the most airy and unlikely subjects which one would associate with the priesthood.

It so happened that the cardinal was coming up to Paris from Rome recently and found himself on French territory on the fateful 8th of May, when the elections were going on and much trouble was expected. Certain of the distinguished travelers had noticed his peculiar appearance, and someone, out of an exaggerated sense of duty toward humanity, telegraphed ahead to Paris a description of the odd passenger, and warned the police that he was probably an anarchist.

Met by Detectives.

As soon as he stepped upon the platform of the station the cardinal was accosted by a couple of detectives, who hurried him off to the nearest police station, despite his earnest protestations against such treatment. The commissaire sent for the prisoner's baggage and had it opened at once in the presence of witnesses. Great astonishment prevailed on the discovery of red robes, scarlet silk stockings, scarlet cap, and a pair of slippers. Every one who had captured a prize criminal traveling with a full set of disguises. The distinguished clergyman lost his temper: "My name is Mathieu," he declared. "I am Cardinal Mathieu." It was all of no avail—nobody would believe him.

At last Cardinal Mathieu prevailed upon the commissaire to permit him, accompanied by two policemen, to drive to the residence of the official Papal representative in Paris, Mgr. Montanini, who immediately identified him.

Weepers at Funerals.

Who would believe that the custom of having weepers at funerals still exists? Yet it does, and the interment of the late Bey of Tunis was honored by their tears. According to the press reports, the ceremony from first to last was attended by an unceasing accompaniment of mad sobs and wild wailings. Every one knows the role played by the weepers among the ancients.

In Greece and in Italy, and even in certain French provinces, weepers are still to be seen at funerals. M. Fallieres, whose Presidential destiny seems to be principally to preside at the inauguration of exhibitions, has just opened a show which is so truly artistic and fine that it deserves to be particularly called to the attention of Americans who will visit Paris this spring.

In one of the galleries of the National Library have been collected, under the auspices of members of the Academy, a series of over a thousand miniatures painted by the greatest masters of that exquisite art who have flourished in France.

Among the works on exhibition those of Jean Baptiste Augustin are particularly worthy of notice. He is represented by four or five pictures, which are portraits of the famous men and women of the days of the revolution.

Americans will be interested to learn that one of the exhibitors at this beautiful show is their compatriot, Mr. Pierpont Morgan, who has bought almost the entire collection of Augustin's works.

Catholics and Masons War.

Catholics and Free Masons in France are at it hammer and tongs. In order to fully understand the importance of the struggle it is necessary to know that the Masonic lodges in France are not at all the non-sectarian, philanthropic institutions which they are in America, but political organizations of anti-clerical tendencies, which are always at loggerheads with the Catholic element in this country.

The Vatican had decided to make a great fuss over the reunion of French bishops which took place on May 30 in Paris. The intention was to send a special Papal legate, and Cardinal Vives, who is by birth a Spaniard and a personal friend of Pope Pius X, was chosen to fulfill that mission. It was under his presidency that the meeting would have been held, and he is a foreigner.

The French government refused to see things that way, and sent word to the Pope that the French bishops would hold their meeting exclusively among themselves. Furthermore, it was added that if the Pope paid no attention to the French government's wishes in the matter, his representative would be arrested upon arriving in France and conducted across the frontier.

The Pontiff, desirous of avoiding the scandal which his enemies were preparing to bring about, expressed his willingness to respect the wishes of the French government, and finally chose as his representative the Cardinal Archbishop of Besancon, who is a Frenchman.

Because he committed this great offense, a citizen of Muehlhausen named Furtmann was arrested the other day and taken before a judge. The policeman who appeared as complainant declared that the sneeze was of an unusually startling nature, and he was corroborated by several passengers on a passing street car, which he stopped to get witnesses as to the disorderly nature of Furtmann's sneeze.

The judge, after having been told by the arrested man that his sneezing was due to a polypus in his nose, acquitted him of all blame, but the police declared that they will appeal to a higher court.

Germans Eat Hogs and Dogs.

Germans may object to eating American canned and embalmed beef, but they seem to have no prejudice against the meat of horses and dogs which is fast becoming the food for the poorer class of the people.

During the first three months of 1904, 44,500 horses were slaughtered in this country, and in the first three months of 1905 this number had increased to 52,584.

According to official statistics published in the Badische Landes Zeitung, of Mannheim, there were 245 dogs slaughtered during October, November, and December of 1905, and in this number are only included the common species of dogs which under official inspection were compelled to give up their lives and allow themselves to be eaten. How many more were killed and eaten privately no one knows.

AMERICA SCORED BY GERMAN PAPER

Declares Packing House Scandal Was Deserved.

PEOPLE'S RIGHTS IGNORED

United States Charged With Being Twenty-five Years Behind Times in Passage of Pure Food Laws.

BERLIN, June 9.—"The people of the United States have just the kind of government they deserve to have," is the verdict of a great socialistic paper in this city in an editorial dealing with the slaughter revelations.

"Though their Constitution gives them every opportunity to elect a truly representative legislature, they have allowed themselves gradually to be robbed of all power, until they are now absolutely unable to take the initiative in anything or to have the smallest voice in the making of their own laws.

"It is a fact that there is probably no government which cares so little for the wishes of the masses of the people as does the American government at Washington. Nearly all European countries have during the last quarter of a century passed laws protecting their citizens from being poisoned by impure food. For years it has been known on this side that most of the products of the great American packing houses were unfit for consumption and twenty-five years ago even the poorest German would never think of using American lard in his home.

"The American authorities must have been fully aware of the shocking conditions existing in the slaughterhouses of Chicago and other great cities; but although American packing house products were condemned in one European country after the other nothing was done by the authorities in Washington for the protection of their people until a book written by a private citizen forced them to do something."

Arrested for Sneezing.

American tourists who think of visiting the kingdom of Saxony this summer had better be careful not to sneeze too loudly in the streets of Saxony towns.

Because he committed this great offense, a citizen of Muehlhausen named Furtmann was arrested the other day and taken before a judge. The policeman who appeared as complainant declared that the sneeze was of an unusually startling nature, and he was corroborated by several passengers on a passing street car, which he stopped to get witnesses as to the disorderly nature of Furtmann's sneeze.

The glass blowers of the Witten district prefer as a beverage a light lager which they consume in huge quantities. The taxpayer in question who has raised the novel point consumes on an average eight pints of beer a day during his work, and thinks he is justified in deducting the price of his beer from his income on the tax schedule.

Japanese Uphold Stoessel.

The Japanese press is very much surprised that the defender of Port Arthur, General Stoessel, has been found guilty of cowardice and sentenced to death by a court-martial, and a prominent Tokyo paper has been telling some truths which have hurt the feelings of the Czar's government very much.

"The blame for the surrender of the fortress rests undoubtedly with the Russian government, which spent millions on the city of Dally and neglected to strengthen the defenses of its natural stronghold, Port Arthur," writes the paper.

NEW HORRORS EXPOSED IN MINE DISASTER

Reports From Couriers Indicate That Miners Imprisoned Two Months Ago Died Only Recently.

PARIS, June 9.—Parisians have been horrified by the news which comes from Courrières, that more bodies have been taken out of the mine, showing traces of recent death from starvation and thirst.

The terrible disaster, in which over a thousand miners were supposed to have been killed, occurred over two months ago. Twenty-one days later thirteen miners came out of the mine alive. A few days later fourteen miners issued from the abandoned pits. All of the survivors declared that they had heard sounds evidently made by survivors trapped like themselves in distant corners of the mine. Among the bodies brought out a few days ago was that of a lad of sixteen, whom the doctors declare upon examination not to have been dead more than ten days at the utmost. The wildest excitement reigns around the scene of the disaster. The crazed men and women at each new evidence that proper steps had not been taken to save possible survivors threaten to lynch the directors and the engineers.

ROYAL TRAVELER BACK IN ENGLAND

Prince Arthur of Connaught Enjoyed Tour.

ON "GARTER MISSION"

Relates to King Edward Some of His Queer Experiences at Big Dinners in Japan.

LONDON, June 9.—Prince Arthur of Connaught, the handsomest member of the royal family, has returned full of anecdotes from his "garter mission" to Japan and his tour through Canada.

King Edward has had several long talks with the young prince, and at luncheon the other day his majesty laughed very heartily over Prince Arthur's description of one Japanese custom.

At the big dinners he attended in Japan the courses ran into two figures, and as the guests were leaving each found a small parcel awaiting him in the outer room. Prince Arthur took his parcel home himself. Instead of handing it over to his equerry, thinking it was a special present.

On reaching home he opened it to find that it contained the food, very much messed up, that he could not get through at dinner. Prince Arthur was surprised to find that the King was well acquainted with this branch of Japanese etiquette.

Rush to See Warwick Pagant.

There is already a great rush for hotel accommodations at Warwick on the part of American visitors, for the Warwick pageant which takes place in July, and which will be the most wonderful out-of-work spectacle ever presented in this country.

A number of Americans are taking rooms at Leamington and Stratford-on-Avon, for the week and will drive over every day to the pageant. The amusing part of this rush for rooms is the fact that Louis N. Parker, the dramatist, who is organizing the whole spectacle, is being inundated by letters from Americans who implore him to secure suites for whole families.

Mr. Parker has at last made it known that he is not an apartment agent, but that there will be soon established a bureau for rooms in Warwick where everybody can apply for accommodations. Two thousand people are already busy rehearsing their parts for the pageant.

Mrs. Adair Is King's Friend.

Strive as she will, no American hostess in London can vie with Mrs. Adair, who has just let her fine house in Curzon street to Mr. and Mrs. Gorden Mills. Mrs. Adair, although a great sufferer from her eyes, is considered indispensable at a royal dinner. She is in what is known as the "holly of holies"—the King's small, but very intimate circle, which includes Mrs. George Keppel, Lady Savile, Sir Ernest Cassel, Conuelo, Duchess of Marlborough; Count Mensdorff, of the Austrian embassy; M. de Soveral, the Portuguese minister, and, of course, the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, and Mrs. Willie James. With these friends around him the King can always talk quite freely, and the reason that Mrs. Adair, of all Americans, is so popular with royalty is that she never divulges a word of the many interesting conversations she hears, and is always bright and witty.

FIGHT COLORED WEARERS OF THE ELKS' EMBLEM

NEW YORK, June 9.—The case of Oldridge R. Johnson, a negro cleaner of the Ludlow street jail, charged with wearing a copyrighted Elk button, was adjourned yesterday in special sessions until next week.

The arrest had been made at the direction of the officers of the grand lodge of Elks, who will fight the case to a finish.

Articulates are longer than any first class coffee.

With a frontage of over 1700 feet on the River, half way between the great Bridges which join New York and Brooklyn, the Arbucks' establishment is one of the show sights of New York. In millions of homes in every section of this country Arbucks' ARIOSA Coffee is the only coffee used, almost the only drink except water; consequently the name of "Arbucks" has been most familiar to the people during the last 37 years, there being no other trade-marked article so widely distributed or in such universal demand. From a small beginning the sales have grown to exceed the combined sales of every other packaged coffee in the United States.

And why? Because Arbucks have given the people the greatest coffee value for their money all of the time, and have sold their ARIOSA Coffee in sealed packages for the consumers' protection, to insure their actually receiving what they paid for, both in quality and in weight. The sales of ARIOSA demonstrate the common sense and appreciation of the American people, and ARIOSA has contributed to their development and prosperity by giving them their money's worth of coffee that increased their power and ambition to work and placed them foremost among the world's greatest nations.

This is the same old ARIOSA and the same old firm that introduced it 37 years ago.

The test of superiority has taught the careful mother that buying ARIOSA Coffee not only means money saved but that she is actually supplying the best coffee for the coffee drinkers of her family.

By the original "Mother's" process patented by this firm, the pores of the coffee are hermetically sealed after roasting with a coating of fresh eggs and granulated sugar which holds the "goodness in," and preserves for you intact, wherever you may be, the delightful aroma and flavor due to our skilled blending and roasting which are not to be compared with crude and primitive methods on a smaller scale.

Buy a package, take it home and grind it as you want to use it. That is the way to get the best results. Coffee deteriorates after being ground or exposed to the air, two reasons why you should refuse to take loose "scoop" coffee—and there are others of importance. Warning ARIOSA slightly makes the grinding easy.

If your grocer tells you he has no Arbucks' ARIOSA, send to us direct. For $1.80 we will send 10 lbs. in a wood box, transportation paid to your freight station. Price of coffee fluctuates and cannot be guaranteed for any period. The coffee will be sent in the original wrappers bearing the signature of Arbucks Bros., which entitles you to presents. New Book with colored pictures of 97 presents will be sent free if you write for it. 4,000,000 presents given away in 12 months.
